Event Background

Summary. Whatever your major or interest, data and digital platform advances change what you do, how you do it, and the skills/talents required to find a great job and succeed. You'll meet Yale alums with data/digital know-how in tech/media, financial services, consulting, and bioscience/health. They'll help you understand and prepare for career and life success after Yale.

Audience. We welcome all Yale College, Graduate School, and Professional School students. Alumni from programs across the entire university are taking part. Each session offers insights from all fields, from quantitative (e.g. data/computer science, math/statistics, etc.), to non-quantitative, to interdisciplinary programs and research.

Setting. Fall is recruiting season, with many firms and alums visiting campus. Graduates of data and computer science programs are in demand, and students with data and digital skills in all fields are also sought after. This event offers you an informal, candid, unplugged, no corporate hype forum. You'll engage alums in career, life, and skills dialog in open panel, Q&A, and reception formats. This is not a recruiting event.

Academics. Yale has entered a period of investment in science, technology, innovation, and entrepreneurship. New buildings, faculty hiring, course offerings, and programs create excitement and opportunities. Computer science is growing. Data science has launched. Informatics and computational platforms are transforming the life sciences and health, and a new bio and health data science initiative is launching. Our panelists offer views from various industries on the competitive power of a Yale education combined with new data and digital skills to prepare for leadership in our increasingly quantitative and digital world.

Partners. Our event is presented by AYA in partnership with alumni organizations, campus groups, and the Yale Office of Career Strategies (OCS). OCS organizes related events with alumni and alumni groups, covering areas such as; Sports & Analytics, STEM Careers, and Security.

Careers, Life and Yale (CLY) programs put Yalies in contact with alumni who offer career/skill insights, concrete advice, and mentoring. Our alums also offer practical life-skills, such as how to think of the future, deal with money, manage time, write a cover letter, network, manage time, speak in public, and survive an interview. CLY goes beyond career guidance with alum-led programs on leadership techniques, team building, self-knowledge awareness practices designed to develop greater self-awareness of strengths and passions.
